Anna Tourtoura

Project Manager at NCSR “DEMOKRITOS”
Athens Metropolitan Area

Summary

I am a Project Manager at the National Centre for Scientific Research “Demokritos” (NCSRD), working within the Knowledge Management Unit on the coordination and implementation of research and innovation projects.My professional background combines project management, strategic communications and stakeholder engagement, with extensive experience in EU-funded research and innovation initiatives. Before joining NCSRD, I worked as Marketing & Communications Coordinator at GRNET, where I managed communication strategies and activities for national and European projects in areas including quantum technologies, AI and advanced digital infrastructures. Previously, as Communication Manager at AgroApps, I coordinated communication and dissemination activities for EU-funded projects, working across international consortia to translate complex research and technical developments into clear, targeted communication for diverse audiences.With an academic background in Law, Public Law and Translation Studies, I bring a multidisciplinary perspective to project management, combining structured coordination, strategic communication and an understanding of the institutional and policy environment surrounding European research and innovation.Fluent in Greek, English and French, I am particularly interested in projects at the intersection of research, technology, European collaboration and societal impact.
